AUTHOR VISIT TO COLEMAN SCHOOL TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12

GRAND CANYON

Chin packs the geologic history of the Grand Canyon into a stunningly illustrated story of a magical father-daughter hike. ### WATER IS WATER

"As usual, Chin blends naturalistic detail with a glint of whimsy... evoking the seasons through shifts of light and changing foliage. A closing section shares additional information about the water cycle, rounding out a story as enchanting as it is informative."—Publisher's Weekly, starred review

REDWOODS

"Chin's watercolor illustrations capture both the majesty of the redwoods and the young boy's inquisitive personality, and while the idea of a storybook so vivid that it comes to life is not new, what sets this one apart is that Chin has paired his fantastical visual narrative with a straightforward nonfiction text."—Horn Book, starred review

ISLAND

"It's not easy to present the story of island formation, species colonization and evolution in a picture book, but Chin succeeds admirably, challenging intelligent young readers with sophisticated concepts, but presenting them in a way that will allow readers not only to understand them, but to marvel at them, as well."—Kirkus Reviews, starred review

CORAL REEFS

"Chin, who pioneered this hybrid form of straightforward nonfiction text and fanciful pictures... offers another statement about the power of reading for an imaginative child with this appealing introduction to a complex world."—Kirkus Reviews, starred review
